To ensure a healthy future for all [COMMUNITY MEMBERS] we have to work together to face these important issues head-on with evidence-based clinical solutions and proven population health strategies. That starts with prevention. As a board-certified preventive medicine physician, I have seen firsthand the power prevention can have when we work upstream to treat not just the symptoms of individual patients, but improve the health and well-being of whole communities. My profession is uniquely positioned to address essential public health issues like [INSERT CHALLENGE(S) REFERENCED ABOVE].

Preventive medicine physicians are leaders in healthcare who bridge clinical skills with experience working in diverse settings - from the halls of government to premier medical institutions, academia, the lab and beyond. This unique perspective can offer value to [INSERT INSTITUTION] by lowering costs, improving patient outcomes, and most importantly, serving the community we call home.

It is only by emphasizing prevention and giving preventive medicine physicians a seat at the table, that we can truly realize the potential we have together to build a better, healthier future for [COMMUNITY].
